

VIA SEPARATIONS

In 2017, we founded Via Separations with a vision to use cutting-edge technology to create value across the industrial sector and simultaneously combat one of the most significant issues of our time – climate change.

When we left MIT for our first home at The Engine, we brought the kernel of that technology to test in the lab. At the time, our proof-of-concept was smaller than the size of a dime. In 2023, we are celebrating a scale-up of over 100,000,000 times as we deploy the first commercial-scale system in collaboration with International Paper, installing more than five American football fields of membrane along with the system that supports it. As we reflect on and commemorate this milestone, we are filled with immense pride in the journey that has led us here, gratitude for the people that have invested in and supported our team, and enthusiasm for what lies ahead.

Our investors and advisors - from the earliest days to today's growth transition - have shared our vision to decarbonize the chemicals sector and believed in what Via Separations can and will achieve. Thank you; your support and feedback have helped us immeasurably.

From the beginning, our team members have demonstrated excellence, beating our own expectations and going above and beyond. We are excited by the bright, talented, and passionate people that are eager to join us and the climate mission in growing our impact on the world. We are energized by the conversation, collaboration, innovation, and execution that we have the privilege of witnessing every day. Thank you; you are our unfair advantage, doing whatever it takes to invent, scale, and deploy the future of manufacturing.

The Via impact has always extended beyond our colleagues to our customers. From providing critical feedback on ideas, to testing the very first prototypes, to supporting the installation of full-scale systems, our current and future customers have built this solution alongside us. We look forward to continuing to partner with forward-thinking, innovative, and collaborative teams at pulp mills across North America and beyond; thank you.

Our deployment at International Paper represents both a culmination of uncountable hours of work from our team, partners, and investors, as well as an inflection point for the next phase of our journey.

Moments like these strengthen our connection to the passion and vision that led us to start Via Separations. Today we are extremely proud of everything we've accomplished together and incredibly excited to do more.
